First Look: PCC Trolley Test Shots

This past month, the first test shots of the ART-23300 Series PCC Trolley Car were received at the Aristo-Craft offices in Irvington, NJ. The shots were then taken to the Big Train Show in Ontario, CA for the car's public debut, where it was warmly received.

Here is what Lewis Polk, President of Aristo-Craft Trains, had to say recently about the PCC Trolley test shots in our online forum:

"Those that have seen it in person all agree that it is a precise replica in shape and detail to the real one, as it should be, as it was made from the original plans. We spent more than a year making sure we had researched this project exactly and that the mold worked reflected the research. Also, 350 photos were taken at a museum of the original car and we have corrected some things the restoration changed. The split destination boards are precisely sized and shaped and the shape of the front and roof are exact. Anyone who says it isn't hasn't seen it in 3D personally.

The full interior is also exact and will be the highlight of the trolley as smaller scales can't really do that part right. The price of $275.00 MSRP makes it an excellent value as compared to brass handbuilds.

This is a mass production product and priced as such. It's a real beauty and will be an eye catcher on any layout. This is a treat for the traction lovers out there and will set a new standard for excellence in the trolley field."

Look for the PCC Trolley to ship in early 2009!

MWLSTS/ECLSTS/SELSTS Update!by Harry Hartman

Harry Hartman is the Large Scale Show Manager for the East Coast Large Scale Train Show, Southeast Large Scale Train Show, and Midwest Large Scale Train Show.

Happy Independence Day! I hope you and your family have a great 4th of July. I hope you get some train time in. It is always great to have friends and family over. It is even better to have family and friends over to "run trains." I have been busy enjoying my new granddaughter. She is seven months old now and I have been sharing some "appropriate" reading material with her. Yes, I have been showing her the latest Aristo Craft Catalog. She enjoys "thumbing" through the pages of the catalogs. I have also been working on my outdoor layout. I am having a storage building built to put my trains in. I plan on putting storage shelves and a work bench in this building. It will also house the power supplies for my display. Then we will start laying the track. I am looking forward to getting my empire rolling.

The Springfield Show is shaping up. The invoices for the vendors have been sent and the invites for the clubs are out. I see people talking about coming to the show in the various forums. As of right now, we have 20 vendors that have indicated they are going to be at the show. We have a few more booth spaces left, so if you know of a vendor you would like to see at the show, tell them to contact JJ Productions at jjproductions@atlanticbb.net or call 908-361-2117 for more information. For this first year, we will not be having any seminars. Some individuals have asked if they can do a demonstration in the back of the hall. If they still want to when the show opens, we will announce it. The September/October issue of the "Insider" will carry the name of the vendors that will be at the MWLSTS. Watch the forum on the Aristo-Craft website and some additional information will be posted on largescaletrainshows.com. An excellent set of show cars and show engines will be available, as well as the ever popular show t-shirts. Remember, these items can only be purchased at the show. No phone or mail orders. Be sure to spread the word and see you at this show.

The Richard T. Orr Building
Home of the 2008 MWLSTS

Several people have written or asked us how they can help with the show. I tell them to advertise by word of mouth or by a flyer to your local clubs. Advertising for these shows is sometimes a hit/miss situation. Local advertising can be too early and then again, to some, it can be too late. When is the right time to advertise locally? Without spending a major amount of money, how can you be sure you reach everyone that would be interested in coming to the shows? We are going to miss someone for sure every time. Some will tell you to advertise on the local TV stations, and some will say advertise in the local newspapers. Well, paid advertising in some of these markets that we hold our shows in is very expensive, especially during "prime time." So you have to send in your announcements to the "community bulletin board" or PSAs (Public Service Announcements) on the radio/tv. Many times these announcements are given more importance if the return address is from a local person or club rather than someone 200+ miles away. So, I encourage you to send in announcements to your local media outlets with the local return address on it. JJ Productions will continue to send press releases/announcements about our shows to the local media outlets, but it helps even more for you, as a local person to send something in about the coming shows. If your local area has some garden clubs, write a short piece about garden railroading and the family fun that garden railroading can bring, and submit them to the local garden clubs. Also, in your short article, be sure to tell them about the up and coming shows in your area. Encourage people to start small. Take some shots of a starter set and what one person could do with it to get started in garden railroading. The more elaborate displays could be talked about in future articles sent to the local clubs. Do not overpower the new readers with sentences like "You have to do this!" or "You need to buy this!" Encourage the "beginner" to purchase the starter set and place it in several different areas for a couple weeks, just to get the feel of what it would look like in a different setting. Then encourage them to buy a couple pieces of straight track and expand their garden railway. I, personally, think we scare the new people off with too many requirements, and those beautiful elaborate displays that take a large investment to get going. How many of us have started small and added a piece or two here and there and then got brave and added a case of track and some switches?

The dates for the 2009 ECLSTS and 2009 SELSTS have been set already, so mark your calendars. The East Coast Large Scale Train Show will be held on March 27th and 28th. The Southeast Large Scale Train Show is moving to a different month for 2009. Hopefully, we will escape the fear and the fact of bad weather preventing people and vendors from attending this show. The last two years in February, Kathy and I had to leave our house early to beat the coming snow or ice storms. Two years ago, it was in the teens in Georgia on a Friday morning of the show. Brrr! That was cold for Georgia. So we have moved the 2009 SELSTS to the Month of May. It will be held on May 1st and 2nd. Again, mark your calendars. Start spreading the word! Already, we have three new vendors for the ECLSTS and two new vendors for the SELSTS that have expressed interest in these shows.

TRACK IS NOT TRACK

Track is not just track, and the type of track chosen does make a noticeable difference in the operation of your trains. You get 30% less copper in all other brands of track other than Aristo-Craft (and USA track, trademark of USA Trains, not related to Aristo-Craft). There is a difference in G-Gauge tracks.

- All other brass G Gauge track makers use a Code C28000 OR CODE 37700 Brass material that has 30% less copper in it than Aristo-Craft track does. Aristo-Craft uses Code C23400, which is 85% Copper as compared to the 59% copper ratio to zinc in the other brands.
- Aristo-Craft provides screws to allow for the rail joiners to conduct power between sections and to hold the ties to the rail. Others do not and this is an expensive step in the production of track. Nothing promotes better operation than your track system!
- One's rail size is not 332, but 354 or larger. You might need a transition piece to work with the other 332 tracks on the market. Also, there is no way to secure the rail joiners to the rails and they will loosen in use out of doors. The rail is roughly rolled, not extruded through a precise mold formation to an exact size.
- One uses an atypical length for their track, so some track plans will need to be modified.
- One does not use the same type of flexible plastic material for its ties, so the material is not as flexible as other makers.
- One's rail joiners are press fit and are not likely to stay connected as well as Aristo-Craft's screw method or LGB's clip method on outdoor track.
- Other maker's rail will cause your trains to noticeably slow down when moving from an Aristo-Craft section to their track section due to the less copper content differences (see below).
- Other maker's rail oxidizes more quickly and thus requires cleaning much more than Aristo-Craft track before operating smoothly.
- Aristo-Craft has a lifetime warranty on its ties and the others do not.
- Other Stainless Steel track makers use a totally different grade of Stainless Steel. Not all stainless is alike and we specifically chose one that is far more rugged in the elements as Code 304. You can ask the others what grade they use and then check the pricing on the international markets for that day. I'm talking about substantial differences in price and in performance depending on the part of the country you're in. Anyone can buy raw materials and knock out a product, but is it the best you can get? When we started with track 20+ years ago we made it the very best we could, not less than was available on the market then. You can choose, but be informed as to the differences in the product you choose.

However, Aristo-Craft will make its 332 "Flex" track only in the lowered standard brass material to match price in this inflationary commodity period. We realize that there are people that run battery and the price, not conductivity is more essential than the quality of operation. However, we will label the packaging carefully, so you know what you're getting. It's up to you! I can tell you that track and its conductivity makes all the difference in the world as to the operation of your trains. The choice as an informed consumer is yours to make!

Dealers...Do you really want to stock another line of track and increase your inventory costs? Aristo-Craft track is readily available from us or your favorite wholesaler to buy along with other products you get from them.

Aristo-Craft Train's Brass Content Information

Red Brass C23400 is generally regarded as the most durable of all metals for commercial water pipe in the practical price range. Nominally composed of 85% copper and 15% zinc, this alloy is excellent for its resistance to dezincification and season cracking for which the high copper brasses are known. It has moderate strength and good retention of spring properties. Resistance to pitting is also particularly good.

Hot and Cold Working: C23400 has good hot workability and excellent cold workability. It is excellent for drawing, spinning, stamping, blanking, or any drastic cold working operations. The metal for this type of operation is furnished in an annealed condition and is classified by grain size, making it easily measurable by both the producer and the consumer, and giving a direct relation to overall mechanical properties.

Joining: Joining by soldering and brazing is excellent. Good joints can be obtained by oxyacetylene and gas-shielded arc welding. Rod, bar and wire may be resistance flash butt-welded.

Applications: C233000 is frequently specified for underground service lines assembled with threaded connections because it offers greatest corrosion resistance to all types of potable waters. Specific applications include costume jewelry, fire hose couplings, and zippers. Because of its availability in several forms, and because of its rich inherent color, it also has become extremely popular as an outdoor metal and has found for itself a very important place in modern architecture. An endless variety of shapes can be obtained by shape-drawing, brake-forming and shape rolling processes. For tube, typical uses are flexible metal hose, electrical conduit, pump liners and paper rolls.

None of the price differences were important until the world market changed, as did gasoline. Look at this chart and if 85% as compared to 61% of the others of our product is made of pure copper we had to reflect this in the price. Did we shoot ourselves in the foot? No. What we did is continue to give you the very best quality regardless of price. When the world reverts to sanity we will adjust the pricing accordingly, but it was to give you the best or not produce at all. We'll let others give you second tier products unlabeled as to content differences, not us! As soon as possible we will put content labels on all of our track product, so that you can make an informed choice.

While we do not want to denigrate our competition, we do want you informed. Excuse the hard facts we have to tell you about and then choose your product carefully.

Stainless Steel 304: The basic alloy. Type 304 (18-8) is austenitic steel, possessing a minimum of 18% chromium and 8% nickel, combined with a maximum of 0.08% carbon. It is nonmagnetic steel, which cannot be hardened by heat treatment, but instead. Must be cold worked to obtain higher tensile strengths. The 18% minimum chromium content provides corrosion and oxidation resistance. The alloy's metallurgical characteristics are established primarily by the nickel content (8% mm.), which also extends resistance to corrosion caused by reducing chemicals. Carbon, a necessity of mixed benefit, is held at a level (0.08% max.) that is satisfactory for most service applications. The stainless alloy resists most oxidizing acids and can withstand all ordinary rusting.

Stainless Steel is the very best choice for your railroad. We've never cleaned our track on our office layout after 4 years and get perfect running all the time.

PLEASE ASK THE VENDOR WHAT GRADE THEY ARE USING!!!!!! It does matter! With Aristo-Craft's buy 4 get one free track sale extended through the end of this year, does it pay to buy a lesser performance?

Take A Ride on the Potscaping Express!

Potscaping is for everyone! No matter whether you have an apartment balcony or a large estate, or you're a seasoned gardener or just starting out. It is a great alternative to weeding. Be creative and use pots to decorate an area for entertaining. Move them around to create an ever-changing landscape. Make a portrait using different sizes of plants, color of blooms or color and texture of leaves. As one stops flowering you can trim it back and move something else forward.

Add motion to your potscape by using the Aristo-Craft brass track circle and adjustable support brackets to fit any 24" pot and use Aristo-Craft trains and scenics to decorate the potscape accordingly. Setting up the trains and track takes just a few minutes and this can be done without any specialized knowledge about model trains. The track and trains are indoor/outdoor capable and can be run in all weather conditions. The track can remain in place year round, though the trains should be brought inside when not in use.

The excitement of watching our Ladybug Eggliner, our Monarch Butterfly or our Honey Bee Eggliners go around the natural setting adds excitement to the pots that joins the whole family into fun times for all. These potscapes can be indoors for a special décor look like bamboo or as a Christmas setting using our Christmas package Eggliner with a tree or poinsettias for example.

Pediatric medical offices can use these to entertain children in the waiting rooms and floral shops can put one in the store window to attract passers-by. Interior designers can use the look and motion to set a décor that's exclusive and personalized to the environment requirements.

This look will be a favorite to all and the motion and beauty of the plantings add a unique look to homes, offices and all public spaces. It's easy and fun and the creativity and imagination of the owner/designer makes the potscape the talking point of all who encounter it.

Gardening is the #1 hobby in the world and everyone loves model trains. Aristo-Craft Trains has put the two together for you and made it both affordable and doable. You provide the pot of your choice and the flowers or Christmas tree and Aristo-Craft supplies the track, trains and the power to operate your creation. Each member of the family can have their own pot to decorate and operate and enjoy and each can be changed according to the season of the year.

Step 1 - Add flowers to your pot.

Step 2 - Next, add track.

Volia! Enjoy your potscape!

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESKAristo-Craft and New Product Testing*by Lewis Polk

Aristo-Craft life tests all new products for 100 hours plus before any production is done. Samples are then sent to us in the U.S., where we test for another 1,000 hours on our outdoor track or in our repair facility. Each power truck module is tested during sub-assembly for several moments and each finished locomotive is tested for several moments before packaging.

Even so, we find that problems can occur during mass production that are not caught on the first runs. However, we rarely see that happen now with all of the checking we do here. Each production run has samples air couriered to us before shipping at the expense of more than $100,000 per year to make sure that the product is above and beyond the QC standard we set. Aristo-Craft's design engineers are here on sight and can spot deviations from the original design concepts immediately. Our engineers are design engineers here, not production engineers and look at the product differently from the engineers at the factory.

Our recent production of the E-8s and GP-40s, have been almost flawless. This is to be as expected, but experience in what to look for helps to minimize problems that have occurred earlier in our learning curve history.

Our repair department says that repairs are down at least 90% from several years ago, in spite of significant production increases.

Key to our production is the standardization of the inner gear boxes used on so many of our locomotives and the factories understanding of the tight tolerances needed to make the product perform as designed.

Factory workers use a spray mask on an Aristo-Craft product, which is part of a new behind-the-scenes DVD coming out later this year.

Also, the mass production of locomotives using red loctite glues is now more fully understood and the waiting period to allow the loctite to dry sufficiently is now clear. For those locos that did have a problem, we did repair them by re-applying and quartering the side rods. According to our repair technicians, none have come back after being updated.

Our parts business is soaring and we're doing our best to keep stocked on parts, but it's very hard to project needs like we can with our general product line. We will have a new shopping cart store and will try to allow some of the more popular parts to be ordered on line. Perhaps this will give us a track record to follow when ordering replacement parts that take up to 6 months to obtain.

We can't always supply painted parts as keeping the same part on hand in a dozen colors is beyond our capabilities for the size of our market. Nor is there a fixed color supplement maker that we can point to to obtain the colors we use. I admit this is a problem, but one that I do not have a current fix for.

We will have a DVD out later this year that shows the entire manufacturing procedure including some QC aspects. The care taken is extraordinary and careful notes are taken for the replication of the quality for each future run of the product. Production engineers specializing in QC are in charge of the production lines, not just skilled up workers. This means that a trained expert surveys the production for problems and uniformity of production. This is most important in our short run style of production, where different products are made on a daily basis, not the same item day in and day out that is more typical of mass production.

Perhaps this contract factory is the world's best for this type of production and we are glad that these skills are brought to our products.
