New Consolidation 2-8-0 Samples!

Here are new updated pictures of the ART-20600 series Consolidation 2-8-0 that is in development by Aristo-Craft. Lewis Polk recently spoke about the Consolidation on the Aristo-Craft Forum board:

"It's a spectacular rendition of the real train and in theory should have been the first one we made. However, the technology of having the electronics in the tender and the patented gear box and smoke were not available when we began some 20 years ago.

It's a treasure that will lead us into the next 20 years and coupled with the plug 'n play Revolution will make for a new standard of G gauge model railroading. It cost a lot of money to make this product, so of course we are anxious to re-coop the outlay. This is the best of the best and we went for the brass ring on this one. I hope the market agrees as it's always a guess when we started planning several years ago.

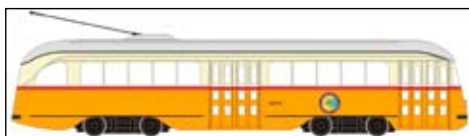

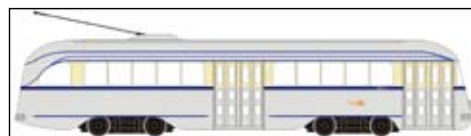

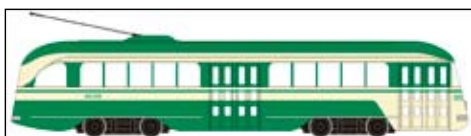

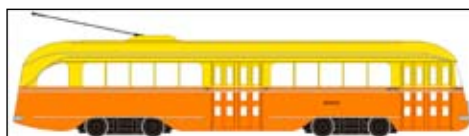

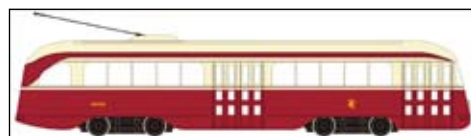

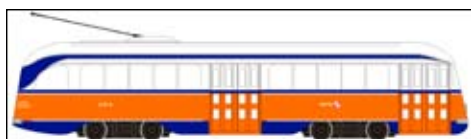

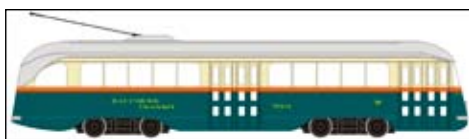

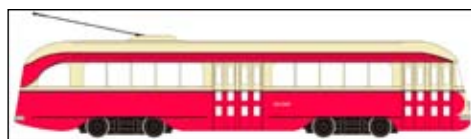

However, no train before it's time and we need to be really sure about this loco's looks and performance before we start mass production.

The ART-20600 series Consolidation 2-8-0 comes out later this year. For more discussion about this item, visit <http://www.aristocraft.com/vbulletinforums/showthread.php?t=14187>.

Pictured above is the engineering sample for the ART22850 RDC-3 loco, which is in development at Aristo-Craft. It has been approved and production has been scheduled for later this year. Also, below are the paint schemes for the loco.

Lewis Polk wrote about the RDC-3 in the Aristo-Craft recently, "This does have a DCC/Revolution socket installed and it's sound ready. Those of you that have the RDC1 will enjoy pairing these together and it's also great for those of you running the single loco version. It does have a super bright lit LED interior and both trucks are powered with our FA-1 style trucks. The freight part of the car is ideal to hold batteries for those of you so inclined. Remember, this is an aluminum body that is highly polished."

The Versatile Revolution TE System

by Ward Hutton

I'm a strict track-power kind of guy. I put down my first G scale brass track about 5 years ago and after a short period of time, bought my first Aristo-Craft 27Mhz Train Engineer remote control system with trackside receiver.

Now, with two brass track loops and one brass track point to point, all controlled by Aristo 27Mhz TEs, I read about the Revolution with slight interest. I liked that it was made for both track power and battery power but until Aristo-Craft produced their Revolution trackside unit, I was not interested. I keep my trackside receivers in my shed 35 ft. from my layout and I liked being able to control the track power remotely. Nope, I did not need the Revolution system. I was happy with what I had. At least I thought so!

Reading the forums, I discovered the Revo could handle 5 amps continuous power and 8 amps max. I use 5 amp fuses in-line between my trackside units and track, so I began to think I could use the Revo receivers as trackside units. I also read how guys were replacing the 27Mhz trackside receivers in their battery cars with the Revo receiver. I figured I could do the opposite. I also read how easy it was to control up to six sounds or auxiliary functions. I love the various sound features in my sound systems so I quickly became much more interested in the Revo system. It wasn't long before I had a Revolution system and a 6 pack of receivers on my work bench.

The Revolution System as a Trackside Controller

The first thing I did was to replace my three 27Mhz receivers with the Revo receivers. I used the adapter boards that came with the receivers to connect the power from my Elite power supply to the track power connections. I then connected the motor leads to my track wires. Since the adaptor board did not support both ends of the Revo receiver, I used the packing foam to support the 10 pin side of the board. Linking the three receivers and setting them as Cab 1 – Track 1, Cab 2 – Track 2 and Cab 3 – Track 3 only took seconds. (Fig. 1)

The Point To Point Track

The start voltage settings and max speed settings work great for controlling the Aristo Auto Reverse unit. I set the start voltage to 25% and the max speed to 75%, which works well for the small locos I run on the point to point. Plus I always know I have the correct polarity for the reversing unit by watching the direction arrows.

The new Revolution Train Engineer

The Narrow Gauge Loop

The Revo control settings, such as momentum and start speed, make the Revo a great wireless system for track power control. All of my narrow gauge locos ran smooth with great low speed performance. The PWC power did not cause any noticeable problems with my non Aristo-Craft locos, although I did not test all brands.

The Mainline

Since I would be using track power for Revo receivers in either locos or control box cars I wanted this track to come up to full power quickly. With the speed steps set to 5 and the start voltage set to the max of 25, the Revo receiver supplied full power to the track in seconds. The Revo receiver has handled three 4 axle locos on this loop without overloading or overheating. When I add two sound box cars, it will overload at 65% speed. Since most of my running is below 50% max speed, I am happy with this. All locos ran smoothly with good low speed performance.

The Revolution System as a PNP Receiver

The first PNP installation was into a GP40. I opened up the loco, pulled out the dummy plug, installed the receiver board, and installed the capacitor board and remote link button. I put the remote link button under the top cover and fed the wire into one of the clip holes, then to the receiver. The capacitor board is recommended when using track power. It helps the receiver run smooth on dirty track. I had made the decision to include the board with all of my installs to help ensure no power problems. (Fig. 2)

Setting up the transmitter with the loco type, name and road number went quickly. A little playing and I had the start speed, momentum and reverse delay set up.

The GP40 ran great with the PNP receiver. An added bonus I did not expect was the headlights remained off until I applied start voltage to the loco. At rest, just the cab and running lights were lit. Pretty cool!

The Revo as a Non-PNP Receiver

My 1998 CNJ RS3 did not have the DCC/RCC PNP board so this install took slightly longer. After opening the loco I found a plug on the main circuit board with two red wires and two black wires. Two were marked Power and two were marked Motor. Studying the board I realized that power came out of the board through the "Power" wires and back into the board to the motors via the "Motor" wires. I installed a Non-PNP board near this plug using circles of hook & loop material. In the photo below, you can see the plug with the power / motor wires in the upper right corner of the circuit board. (Fig. 3)

Note - This board is a separate purchase. It has screw terminals instead of wire leads to make connections, which make the install easier. I cut the power wires and connected them to the track power connections of the PNP board. This supplied power to the RX. I did the same with the motor wires, connecting them to the motor output connections on the PNP board. (Fig. 4)

I had previously installed new LEDs for headlights so I found those wires and connected them as shown in the Revo manual.

The capacitor board did not fit under the long hood because of the smoke unit. I cut the board in half and soldered wire jumpers across the cut traces of the board. (Fig. 5)

I was then able to mount the capacitor board as two rows of three caps. This allowed it to be mounted under the short hood. I again fed the plug of the remote link button through a clip hole and down to the receiver. This install took a bit longer and a bit more work than a PNP install but it was still not difficult. (Fig. 6)

Fig. 6

Again, setting up and linking the receiver to the transmitter was quick and easy. By separating the headlight wiring and connecting it to the Non-PNP board I again had cab and marker lights lit by track power and the headlight controlled by the receiver.

The Revo as a Track Powered Control Car

I use sound box cars rather than installing sound cards in each loco. I decided to try the same thing with the Revo receiver.

I opened a newer RS3 that had the DCC/RCC PNP board. I then went to the Aristo web site and found a DCC/RCC Connector Wiring Diagram under the Technical Support section. Studying the diagram and notes I found that pins 1 and 2 and pins 11 and 12 were for power connections. Pins 3 and 4 and then 9 and 10 are for motor and headlight connections. The power, motor and headlight pins were connected by a circuit board trace on the dummy plug. While I had track power pick ups in my sound box car, I wanted to also pick up power from the RS3. So, I cut the traces between pins 2 and 3 and between pins 10 and 11 on the dummy plug. (Fig. 7)

Leaving the Track/Battery switch in the track position, the factory installed MU connector would supply track power from the loco to the box car.

The next step was to solder another MU connector, with a female end, to pins 3 and 4 and pins 11 and 12 after running the wires in from the area of the coupler (Fig. 8)

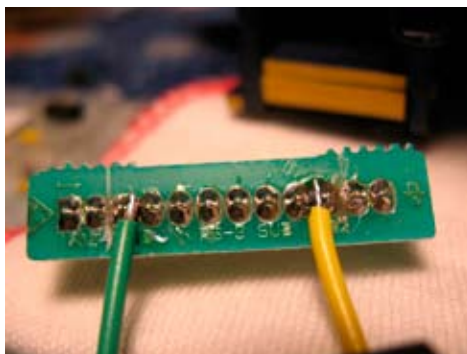

Fig. 8

This set up allows me to run the loco on track power just by connecting the male and female MU connectors (Fig. 9)

Note – Photo 9 shows a MU connection to the front of the loco also. I can connect another loco to this MU connector, which supplies motor power from the RX.

With the loco wiring complete, I opened the box car and installed a Non-PNP board and receiver, again using hook & loop material. I drilled a hole in the floor of the box car behind the area for the body mount coupler. I ran two MU connectors, one male and one female to the Non-PNP board. The female MU wires were connected to the track power connections on the board and the male MU wires were connected to the motor output connections of the board. I also installed the capacitor board and connected it to the receiver. Using an idea David Bodnar presented at the York Revolution Seminar, I connected a reed switch to the wiring harness of the remote link button and mounted the reed switch on the edge of the box car floor. This will allow me to use a magnet to link the receiver to the transmitter.

The power inputs of my sound card had been wired to track power. I now moved them to the motor outputs of the receiver. I plugged in the auxiliary wiring harness and ran the wires to various sound trigger terminals of the sound card.

I connected the control/sound box car to the RS3 using the MU connectors, programmed the transmitter and linked the receiver. I powered up the track, hit the forward button on the transmitter and the loco slowly moved forward with the appropriate diesel sounds coming from the box car. Pressing the 1-6 keys played the various sounds like bell and manual horn. By having the receiver in the box car with the sound board I have full control over both the sound board and the loco.

I had now used the Revolution receiver successfully in four completely different installations, all using track power. The receiver worked as a PNP unit, Non-PNP unit, in a control car and as a trackside power controller. The ease of programming, controls, and features of the 2.4Ghz Revolution TE system have allowed me to move to a new way of running my trains. It has proven to be a versatile receiver, capable of several types of track power installations. I thought I was happy before, but now I am very happy!!

2009 Fall ECLSTS Is Coming Soon!

by Harry Hartman

Harry Hartman is the Large Scale Show Manager for the East Coast Large Scale Train Show.

The month of May ended with a big bang (boom) for the Hartmans. I was volunteering to help restore an old 1930s Wooden B&O Caboose. We were stripping the old rotten wood off the caboose and putting new wood on it. I was helping put water seal on the new boards and I got my feet tangled up in some sawhorse legs and fell. Well, my hand hit the wall and I broke my shoulder in 5 (yes, five) places. I fell on May 30th. I had surgery on June 9th for a partial replacement. I have a metal ball and stem in my shoulder now. I am going through rehab to regain the use of my shoulder. It is very hard to type and write since it was my right shoulder and I am right-handed. I have turned into a one-handed typist.

2009 Fall ECLSTS Covered Hopper Production Model

Enough of that, and now about the Fall ECLSTS!

Well, we are very busy contacting returning vendors and some new vendors about securing space at the first Fall ECLSTS show.

As we have told you before, we at JJ Productions take the time to listen to your suggestions. We evaluate them and then, when possible, try our best to implement them. Obviously, there are some suggestions we have no control over or cannot make changes to for the shows, but the suggestions we received that we can do something about, we do.

You have been asking for a Fall ECLSTS and here it is. I must say that finding an open date that the fairgrounds had and that was not close to some other show that many of the vendors attended was difficult. So now that we have September 25th & 26th as the Fall ECLSTS dates, we hope you have marked your calendars and are making preparations to attend this show.

Many of you have asked how you can help us with this show and our answer has been "Talk it up in your clubs, with your friends and neighbors and bring them with you to the show." We have always found that an article in your local newspaper written by someone in your club announcing that club members are getting ready to attend the show gets printed quicker and in a more predominate spot in your local newspaper than an article/announcement from a postmark that is over 100 miles away.

Another thing you asked for was a "different kind" of show car. We know you said you enjoyed the great road names on the box cars, but you wanted something different so, again we listened, and the 2009 Fall ECLSTS is a hit before it gets to the show. It is a very beautiful looking car. Its prototype runs the rails all around the York area and some have been seen in the York train yards. The Winchester & Western Covered Hopper is the Fall ECLSTS's show car. This car has created a lot of talk and interest on the Aristo-Craft Forum. So I would highly recommend that if you want one or a set of all 4 road numbers, you had better get there early.

Remember this car contains a first. This Winchester & Western Covered Hopper was ordered to come with modern roller-bearing freight trucks. This will be the first time it has been ordered and sold with the modern freight trucks. Oh yes, it has been ordered with metal wheels.

This Fall ECLSTS will have some new vendors and stay tuned for the September Insider, as it will contain the list of vendors and seminars.

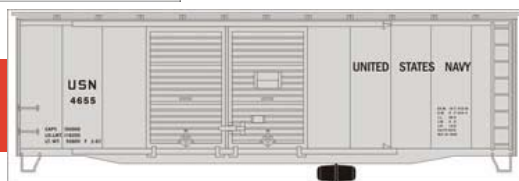

An important piece of information to remember about the Fall ECLSTS: Be sure to make your hotel reservations soon. There is a Harley Open House that weekend and they say the hotels fill up quickly. So if you have not made your reservations and need to, do it now.

I would also like to let you know that for the Spring ECLSTS for 2010, the show car is looking like it will be something different. Not a boxcar, reefer, or covered hopper.

September 25th & 26th will be here before you know it. Remember, talk to your friends and invite them to the show. Let them see what you are so excited about with your hobby.
