VOL. 20 - NO. 4

JULY - AUGUST 2012

AN INTERVIEW WITH SCOTT POLK

It's been six months since Scott Polk took over as president of Aristo-Craft Trains, so the Aristo-Craft Insider decided it was time to learn more about Scott and his plans for Aristo-Craft and Large Scale as a whole.

Aristo-Craft Insider: So, Scott, you've been in charge of Aristo-Craft for a few months now. How has it been going so far for you?

Scott Polk: It's been going great. I have a great support system not only in the office but at home as well that has really made the transition smooth.

AI: For those who don't know, talk a little bit about your background.

SP: My background has always been within the toy/hobby industry. The majority of my professional career was spent with FAO Schwarz and Build-A-Bear Workshop. From stockroom to corporate with both companies, I always loved finding that child in everyone.

AI: Where do you see the large-scale model railroading hobby at this point in time?

Scott Polk, President of Aristo-Craft Trains

SP: Stable. There have been a lot of changes through out the G Gauge community over the last year, and the majority of us have managed to adapt and overcome. The end user continues to show strong support to us all. I am very optimistic for Aristo-Craft's future, between future (new) production and finished goods that will be coming in the second half of the year.

AI: Since taking over, you've been using things like Facebook and Twitter to reach out to customers. How has the Internet helped Aristo-Craft?

SP: It has helped tremendously. There are so many ways to reach consumers these days on the Internet and we plan on using all of them. This is a big change for our end users. The thought is to continue to supply our current customers information faster and easier while reaching a million more people who have never heard of us or our industry.

AI: The new web site (www.aristocraft.com) is considered the centerpiece of your vision for Aristo-Craft. Why is it so important?

SP: I am proud of our new brand site. This was a drastic change and most people don't like change. The site isn't finished and it never will be. Things continue to be added and changed everyday. This site will be our focal point for all things to come in the future. I don't want to let too much out of the bag about it.

AI: Dealing directly to the consumer is perhaps your biggest policy change to Aristo-Craft as the new president. Why make the change? What's been the biggest misconception about it?

SP: Yes, it has been (a big change). We got the feeling that people thought we were being selfish. Here's how it works. We want to provide, and continue to provide, great affordable product to our extremely loyal end users and we will do that any way we can. It needed to be done. There is a lot more to it, though.

AI: Over the years, garden railroad clubs have helped build and expand the hobby. How do they fit into your vision for Aristo-Craft?

SP: They play a bigger part of my vision than they even know yet. That part of our business plan hasn't been announced yet. Watch out, Clubs, I have big plans for you.

AI: How do you plan to attract new people to the hobby and get them invested in large-scale model trains?

SP: There is no science to this, but we wish there was. 99% of the population have no idea about G Gauge trains. With the Internet playing a big factor for any industry, we will do all the fun behind-the-scenes Internet programming that will help reach a portion of that percentage. Our new marketing plan also involves a lot of marketing outside of our normal channels.

We'll have more with Scott Polk in the September - October issue of the Aristo-Craft Insider. Check back then for more Q&A with Scott!

NEW SD-45 TEST SHOTS

New SD-45 models are in production right now. Here are the first test shots of the new paint schemes: 22407 NS Hi-Nose, 22421 Montana Rail Line, 22423 ATSF, and 22426 - Pan Am Railways. These items will be in stock later this year.

WHY DOES ARISTO-CRAFT MAKE ITS PRODUCTS IN CHINA?

by Lewis Polk

The title of this article is one of the questions I am asked most often when meeting other hobbyists. What many people don't realize is that 90% of all model trains are made in China.

I entered China for the first time soon after the Bamboo Curtain was lifted in the late 1980s. Prior to that, all production was done in Hong Kong in huge factory complexes often in the New Territories that was not part of the island complexes. The tight quarters made "Just-In-Time" parts deliveries a must and all of the parts were available through personal contacts who could be in your office in a very short time with one phone call. Quotes were made and deliveries were local and without shipping costs.

When South China opened up, the Hong Kong businessmen rushed in. They built or leased space with a luxurious amount of room for production and used the huge billion people base to expand production. Yes, water was on alternate days and they had to generate their own electricity, but these were minor problems considering the growth and quick access to the ports of Hong Kong, just a short distance from the former H.K. production facilities. Most companies kept their offices in Hong Kong for delivery, warehousing and sales, so the communication remained fast regardless of where the product was actually made. In China, it's not unusual for the neighboring factories to have no idea what is made nearby since all contact is done through the Hong Kong offices.

While it's true that plastic is injected in-house, most everything else is delivered in the "Just In Time" method and coordinated by computer production scheduling. No project can begin until the last screw arrives from a supplier and there may be 20 different screws involved in each locomotive. Each product component needs to be grouped into sub-assemblies and each part needs to be inspected before the sub-assemblies are made. Included in the many parts are: bulbs, wires (with solder), motors, metal parts, PC boards, plating of parts, paints, pad plates, masks, weights, foam, packaging, manuals, wheels and cartons. Often there are specialty parts like our track cleaning pads, but most are made up of the parts listed above.

The Aristo-Craft Factory Assembly Line

Hong Kong has these myriad of parts made nearby and allows for the type of production that is efficient, delivery sensitive and quality control checkable. In effect, short run production, where we make a different product sometimes on a daily basis, is done best in China. Sanda Kan is still one of the best short run facilities in the world and certainly so for the niche market of model trains. By pooling together a string of smaller companies under one roof, the economies of scale are much better than if each was trying to do the same job on their own.

While some buyers of Chinese product have campaigned for lower prices and received inferior products; many companies have pushed for superior quality and have amazing success with China production. Apple is the shining example of quality in China, but most Japanese products are actually made in China, too. Computers are well built in China as well as mobile phones, e-book readers and a bevy of products that meet and exceed expectations. The U.S. needs to concentrate on large volume production that can be mechanized and our labor force needs to be trained to make production here more economical to large volume savings. Just the shipping costs alone give us the edge if we can just match costs with the surety of local production.

As the agrarian rice-driven economy is more based on production than stoop labor, the costs will rise, but also the quality will grow as well. The Chinese graduate more engineers than we graduate college students and this will reflect well on their new production-based economy.

IT'S ALL IN THE DETAILS

Aristo-Craft started manufacturing from scratch in the G Gauge size. Some of the lessons learned since our start in 1988 are:

- Make one good gearbox that can be interpreted for almost every locomotive without re-certifying and testing for each model. That's time-consuming and expensive and we had a great design that we patented.
- Use a higher grade of rail to allow for better current and less oxidizing.
- Use a high-grade nichrome wire for smoke and include an auto shutoff to stop burning.
- Use a top-notch ABS engineering plastic and not use any polystyrene for outdoor trains.
- Use a flexible Nylon 66 in locations that were susceptible to breakage.
- Use deep flanges to keep the locos on the track when weather and terrain means irregular road beds.
- Use a high frequency to keep motor noise interference away from radio signals.
- Do product artwork ourselves to stop the need for explanations as to accuracy and locations.
- Package all product with foam inserts to make sure the product arrives factory fresh to every location.
- Package each product with its own shipping carton to achieve perfect delivery through the chain of distribution.
- Make sure detail parts are molded in to stop breakability and ensure durability over the life of the product.
- Extra weight can also cause shipping damage, so let the end user add the weight they are most comfortable with.
- Use LEDs when possible as the lights drain current at a much higher rate than even the motor.
- Add battery options to as many locos as possible as they result in cleaner running for the motor and the track.
- Use 14-16 gauge wire to run to tracks and in between tracks when using track power.
- Use special mold machines for consistency of pressure and heat when making gears.
- Use ball bearings on heavy passenger cars.
- Do not stress engines without using helper engines like the real railroads do. For example, a 100-car consist needs at least 3 locos, with one being a rear pusher.
- Radio control is more efficient than track signal controls. The signal goes directly to the loco and does not have to pass through large amounts of often dirty rail.
- Sante Fe, UP and PRR make up more than half of all road name sales.
- A business must be computer controlled to carefully understand costs and sales possibilities.
- Clean power from either batteries or switching power supply computer chips is better than an analog copper coil input.
- Use connectors between cars and locos to even out power input to stop bad pickup spots.
- Add circuit breakers to every loco to stop current surges.
- Rail clamps are better on curves than joiners and are a necessity for switch removal.

ECLSTS UPDATE by Harry Hartman

What's that old-time saying? "Spring has sprung, fall has fell, and summer is here and it is hot enough to yell!" (or something like that.)

Since Spring sprung around here early this year along with the mild winter we had, it brought an early growing season. Many of you are busy running trains right now. I have talked with my friend Alan in England several times and he has told me about his running times and rain-outs.

I have had to dust off the rails on my porch for my grandchildren. I have a granddaughter that is into trains and a grandson who is 19 months old, really gets "cited" (his language for excited) when the ole Western Maryland Consolidation fires up and goes around the track.

Many of you are busy using purchases from the 2012 East Coast Large Scale Train Show. There was a bunch of stuff purchased and a lot of smiling faces when they left the show.

As you are enjoying your trains, we at JJ Productions are busy working on the 2013 ECLSTS. We have the show hall booked, we are in the process of working out deals with the hotel, and we are busy working on the show car. It will be a freight car.

Many of you don't realize the process we have to go through to produce a show car. Once a body style is chosen, then a road name will be selected for that car.

Then permission needs to be obtained to be able to use their names and/or logos on the car. Sometimes the companies get back to you right away and sometimes they will require a "royalty fee." Whatever we choose for the 2013 ECLSTS, it surely will be something that has not been produced before.

Enjoying one of the layouts at the ECLSTS

I can tell you that the price on the show car will be more than the usual $50.00 fee.

Looking ahead to the 2013 ECLSTS, if you have a vendor that has not been to the show, you may want to encourage them to request vendor information and then encourage them to attend.

If you have a favorite vendor that has not been at the ECLSTS for a couple shows, again, encourage them to come back.

The ECLSTS is a show where you can see it all: vendors with trains for sale, vendors with accessories for sale, vendors with display ideas, and manufactures of G Scale products for you to ask questions about their products. You can also see clubs with display ideas and lots of friendships are formed at these shows. It has been said time and time again, the shows are almost like a family reunion.

I have been in contact with TATE (our friendly little bear) and he WILL be at the 2013 show. TATE said he would like to do the "Orphaned Trains" booth for a fundraiser for the Center for Missing and Exploited Children. So start looking through your empire and see if there is an orphan at your train yard. Let TATE know what you have and maybe we can get some of the goodies posted before the show and draw some more interest or donations. It is all for a good cause.

I know, the show is 8 months away and you can't wait. Enjoy your trains, start your list for the 2013 ECLSTS, and share the hobby with someone new 2 or 3 times a month. Then be sure to bring that new person to the show with you. See you next issue!
